Cha House – the Evolution of Event Destinations
Where Traditional and Modern Cultures Compliment

(Immediate release – Shanghai, China) Located in the heart of Jing’an District encompassing a diverse range of retail and entertainment offerings, the heritage building Cha House is recognised as a unique event venue that embraces a rich and fascinating history and symbolises the city of the past with the Shanghai of the future.

Originally, one of a pair of luxury mansions owned by two Shanghai tycoons back in the 1920s, the structure became part of a middle school campus in 1940. This century-old building was previously located in Dazhongli, the largest cluster of traditional Shikumen structures in Shanghai. By 1999, Cha House was acknowledged as one of Shanghai’s heritage architecture. To preserve this cultural asset and blending the perfect harmony between historical and modern landscapes in Jingan district, the building was physically moved 40 centimeters vertically and 57 metres horizontally to its current location. It adheres to the core ideals of “Respect the People, Cherish the Land” espoused by HKR International Limited founder, Cha Chi-ming.

Aiming to restore the building to its original condition, the exterior façade was kept and all walls, columns, timber beams and roof trusses were reinforced. The three-storey building features a typical baroque style, rising to four floors on the East and West sides. The first floor façade is made of artificial stone with plain red-brick walls. The middle section of the second floor consists of verandas with arches and iconic columns. The Northern façade features Southern Yangtze River traditional architectural characteristics, accompanied with exquisite wood decorations. From the mosaic floor comprising a mix of red, yellow and black tiles, to the Spanish spiral railings and carvings in the shape of lotus flowers and pearls, guests can experience a mesh of both traditional and contemporary Shanghai culture amassed over a century of existence.

To continue the legacy of this heritage building, the Cha House is managed by The Sukhothai Shanghai. The rich heritage of this traditional building has metamorphosed into a one-of-a-kind destination for art exhibitions, private previews, product experience, cocktail receptions and more. The venue space can be divided into different sections for different purposes perfect for accommodating crafted event from 50 to 200 persons per floor. Cha House takes guests on a journey across time - the past, the present and the future, and more importantly, guests are led on an exploration of its living spaces.
